Iran vows retaliation for attack on airliner

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — A bitter and angry Iran vowed Monday to attack American targets in retaliation for the 290 people killed aboard an Iranian jetliner by a missile fired from a U.S. warship in the Persian Gulf.

As Iranian crews grimly searched the waters for more bodies, the Moslem country observed a nationwide day of mourning for the 274 passengers, 66 of them children, and 16 crew members lost Sunday aboard the Iran Air Airbus A-300. At the same time, Americans celebrated their 212th Independence Day.

Iran insisted the twin-engine jet flew in an internationally recognized flight path at no more than 300 mph. It argued there was no justification by a U.S. warship to mistake the plane for an F-14 jet fighter.

Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. William Crowe said the airliner was flying outside its "prescribed air corridor" at 517 mph when the USS Vincennes, in midst of a sea battle with Iranian gunboats, mistook it for an F-14 and launched two Standard missiles at the jet from nine miles away after the incoming jet ignored radioed warnings.

By nightfall Monday in the gulf, Iranian rescue units recovered 168 bodies from the gulf, some of them about three miles away from the crash scene, Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency said. Divers searched in 102 feet of gulf water for missile snarfel.

A Standard missile could blow apart an aircraft. But it was not known if the midair explosion disintegrated the jetliner immediately, killing those aboard instantly. Intact bodies were found floating in the gulf.

The Vincennes maintained its routine patrol duties in the gulf Monday. A Navy inspection team headed for the area to find out why the new $1 billion Ticonderoga class cruiser, equipped with the most sophisticated radar gear afloat in the U.S. Navy, fired missiles at a plane three times the size of an F-14 fighter.

Ayatollah Hossein Ali Montazeri, the designated successor to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, appealed over the state-run Tehran Radio for Islamic fundamentalists worldwide to make "detailed plans" for the "struggle against the United States."

He urged Khomeini to give the order to "forces of resistance cells inside and outside the country" to draw up "appropriate plans" for attacks on "material, political, economic and military centers of the United States."

In Washington, President Reagan appeared to take the threats seriously when he said, "You have to think about that, knowing who they are."

In Rome, Italian military sources said the Italian frigate Espero reported from the gulf that the jetliner had strayed from its assigned air corridor and overheard the Vincennes repeatedly ask the Iran Air pilot to identify himself. The Airbus never answered.

Iran Air Flight 655 had taken off for Dubai, a cosmopolitan city in the United Arab Emirates across the Strait of Hormuz from Iran. Dubai is known as the shopping paradise of the gulf because of its abundance of Japanese-made cameras, stereos and other electronic home

Professor arrested on charges of sexual abuse of 12-year-old boy

By Christine Cedusky
Staff Writer

Carbondale police arrested University art professor Dan Wood Friday on sexual assault and abuse charges based on a complaint made by a 12-year-old boy.

Wood, 45, was arrested at his home, 607 W. Walnut St., Carbondale, on charges of aggravated criminal sexual assault and aggravated criminal sexual abuse. Neal Jacobson, police chief executive assistant, said.

Complaints allege Wood had sexual relations with the youth over the past six months, Jacobson said. Wood declined to comment on the charges and directed further questions to Richard White, his attorney. White could not be reached.

The youth's name and hometown were not released. But more information may become available today, Jacobson said.

Wood, an associate professor of art, was released after posting $2,000 cash on a $20,000 bond. Jacobson said Wood is to appear in court on July 22.

The investigation is being conducted by Carbondale police, the Jackson County State's Attorney's Office and the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

International students celebrate 4th at fair

By Christine Cedusky
Staff Writer

Carbondale celebrated the Fourth of July a little differently this year, bringing international flavors and colors to University Mall.

The first Carbondale World Fair, an international festival held Monday, celebrated Independence Day with exotic foods and colorful costumes from different cultures.

Students from several countries represented their heritages with booths exhibiting crafts, artifacts, posters and videos about their homelands.

The International Student Council had exhibits from nations such as Nigeria, Singapore, India, China, Pakistan, Thailand and Turkey. An American Indian exhibit also was on display.

Faruk Okuz, president of the Turkish Association for ISC, said he liked the festival and enjoyed informing people about his country. Along with a display of Turkish plates and stockings, Okuz also showed a video of Turkey.

Dar Walks Out, an American Indian, displayed her hand-made beaded jewelry. Walks Out said she is the first American Indian to join ISC and is the only native Indian in the area who actively represents her Sioux/Cheyenne heritage.

She is originally from North and South Dakota and is studying health at the University. Walks Out wants to bring better health programs to remote areas of the Dakotas.

The Council also presented an international fashion show representing each nation's traditional dress.

Council president M. Ali Firouzi, an Iranian, said the University School graduates reunited

By Kimberly Clarke
Staff Writer

They came from around the world and all walks of life. For many, their only common tie was their school.

About 850 graduates of the University School, a teacher training school on the University campus that closed in 1971, were reunited in Carbondale this weekend, Jane Phelps, spokeswoman for the committee that organized the reunion, said.

The University School was the combination of the University's Model School (grades 1-8) and Preparatory School (high school), which provided practical experience for prospective teachers for about a century from the time the University opened its doors in 1847 as a regional teachers' college.

Saturday, the graduates and former teachers at the school attended the reunion dinner and reception in the Student Center ballrooms.

John Mees, president of the University School from 1946-1965 gave a speech, said Phelps. Charles Taylor, president of the school when it closed, led the graduates in singing the school song.

Sunday, a family picnic was held for about 900 to 1,000 graduates, teachers and their families.

"(The committee) received a very warm reception. The graduates were so pleased that someone organized the reunion," Phelps said.

The committee started officially organizing the reunion in June 1987. All former graduates and staff that could be located were invited.

A yearbook also was compiled. It contained a brief

PLO followers killed by rebels in Lebanon camp

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Pro-Syrian rebels firing artillery, rockets and machine guns Monday beat back followers of PLO chairman Yassir Arafat who tried to fight their way out of an embattled refugee camp, police said. Police said four people were killed and 45 others wounded in the fierce fighting that lasted several hours at the Bourj Barajneh Palestinian refugee camp in south Beirut, the largest of three shantytowns in the capital.

Lawyers ask to reopen 'Sharpeville six' case

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Lawyers filed a court petition Monday to save the "Sharpeville six" from the gallows and said they will seek clemency from President Pieter W. Botha if their last legal recourse fails. The appeal asks the case be reopened on the grounds that a star state witness gave false testimony under police pressure to convict the five black men and one black woman of the 1964 killing of a black councilman.

Assassination ends peaceful politics

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, the leading leftist presidential candidate, planned to meet Monday with Mexico's interior minister to seek answers to the weekend assassination of his coalition's national coordinator. The killing brought an unexpected and possibly dangerous factor into the presidential campaign, which had developed peacefully until now.

Amerasians leave Vietnam to find U.S. fathers

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (UPI) — Twenty-eight Amerasian children celebrated the Fourth of July by saying goodbye to the homeland of their mothers as they began a long journey to the country of American fathers most have never known. The Vietnamese-American children and 50 of their relatives began their journey to the United States Monday as part of a gradually accelerating program to bring all of the estimated 10,000 Amerasians in Vietnam to the United States within two years.

Soviets finish inspections of U.S. military sites

TRAVIS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — Teams of Soviet experts Monday headed back to Travis Air Force Base after completing their first inspection visits to top-secret U.S. military sites in four western states. A 70-man entourage from Moscow — divided into five separate teams and accompanied by U.S. escorts — toured a half dozen Air Force and Army missile sites in Arizona, California, Colorado and Utah.

Holiday fireworks start fire in national parks

Fourth of July fireworks ignited a 2,200-acre fire on the edge of Yosemite National Park while a lightning-sparked brushfire raged out of control over 8,000 acres in the Tonto National Forest near Phoenix, officials said Monday. "At this point, it's definitely out of control," Joyce Hassell, Tonto Forest spokeswoman said. "We don't even have it contained right now."

Thousands view Discovery shuttle at Florida

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — By dawn's early light, the rebuilt shuttle Discovery was hauled to its launch pad Monday in a stirring Fourth of July milestone for America's resurgent space program with the first post-Challenger launch just two months away. Throughout the morning, thousands of proud Kennedy Space Center workers and family members slowly drove past Discovery's oceanside launch pad in a morale-boosting, bumper-to-bumper pilgrimage to view the towering spaceship, scheduled for blastoff in early September.

At least 12 people, including two children, have been killed in traffic accidents on Illinois roads since the Fourth of July holiday weekend began, authorities said Monday. A scale model of a coal preparation plant is on display at the University Museum.

Mining process on exhibit

By Laurie Schenk
Student Writer

The answers to many of the questions a person has about surface mining can be found at the coal mining exhibit at the University Museum.

The exhibit, a complex 24-foot long scale model of a surface mine, uses miniature mining equipment including transport train cars and trucks to illustrate the mining process.

The display was donated by Amax Coal Co., Jack Whitlock, museum director, said.

Exhibit designer Alan Harasimowicz said putting the exhibit together was like working a jigsaw puzzle.

"The exhibit originated as 150 individual pieces and took approximately three months to assemble," Harasimowicz said. "The difficulty came in because it came without directions.

"The biggest challenge was restoring the dragline. It arrived in 70 to 75 pieces."

Harasimowicz said four student workers helped him do most of the work on the project.

"Once it was constructed, every cubic inch was manicured," he said.

Amx contacted State Rep. Jim Rea, D-Christopher, to ask about donating the display to the University. Whitlock said the exhibit was obtained with help from the University's Coal Research Center.

The company chose the University to show the display, which was originally shown at the Indiana State Fair in Indianapolis, because of the amount of mining operations in the region.

The piece consists of a replica of the dragline, a large piece of equipment that is in reality 400 feet long and is the initial step in the mining process.

The second phase of the exhibit examines the reclamation process that restores the mined lands to their original condition. The third phase shows how coal is processed and readied for shipment.

A reception will be held to show the exhibit to area state legislators and those interested in developing research on coal, Whitlock said.

The mining exhibit will be on display for an undetermined amount of time in the museum in the north wing of Faner Hall.

One woman killed, one wounded in bar

A 28-year-old woman was shot to death and another woman wounded early Saturday morning at Kousin's Riverside Club on old Illinois Route 13 east of Murphysboro.

Estella M. Bay, of Colp, was pronounced dead at St. Joseph Memorial Hospital in Murphysboro at about 4 a.m.

Police arrested Larry Parker, 39, of Carbondale shortly after the shooting. Parker is suspected of murder, but no formal charges have been filed, according to the Jackson County Sheriff's Department. He is being held in Jackson County jail and is to appear in court today.

The second woman who was shot is hospitalized in satisfactory condition. Her name is being withheld.

No further details about the case were released.

The investigation is being conducted by the Jackson County Sheriff's Department, Murphysboro police, Illinois State Police Division of Crime and Crime Scene Technicians from the State of Illinois.

Legislature passes budget; tuition increase undecided

By Susan Curtis
Staff Writer

SIU's appropriations budget passed by the legislature last week includes a salary increase of about 5.7 percent for faculty and staff.

The budget also includes $650,000 for the asbestos removal project in Pulliam Hall, Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit said Monday.

However, Pettit said he will meet with the vice chancellors and presidents of all SIU campuses on July 8 and 13 to discuss the budget and the possibility of a tuition increase.

Pettit said last week that it will be about two weeks before a decision is made about increasing tuition.

An increase in tuition would offset the loss of revenue that would have been generated by new state taxes. Gov. James R. Thompson proposed a 40 percent increase in personal and corporate taxes, but he declared his proposal dead last Tuesday.

Pettit said he did not know how much a tuition increase would be or even if there will be one, but "we can't rule it out."

Skillet ignites fire in chute

A hot skillet and its contents were thrown down a trash chute, igniting trash in the bottom of the shoot Monday evening at Carbondale Towers.

The fire was extinguished by the building's sprinkler system, John Manis, assistant fire chief at Carbondale Fire Station No. 2, said.

"There was minimal damage to the building," Manis said. "The only real damage was from water on the second floor."

The fire is considered to be accidental, he said.

Prof to help direct country's educational growth

By Julia Hilliger
Student Writer

While most people in Southern Illinois will be struggling to keep cool in August, one University dean will be wearing winter gear.

Harry Miller, dean of the College of Technical Careers, will don sweaters and a jacket because he will be in Southern Africa where it will be winter.

The educator's journey to the African nation of Lesotho is sponsored and funded by the U.S. Information Agency.

"I'll be looking at how and in what direction technical education in Lesotho should take and how it should interface with economic development," Miller said.

It will not be Miller's first encounter with people from foreign lands. In fact, he said, his experience in dealing with post-secondary education and developing countries is the reason he was chosen to go to Lesotho.

Miller has done studies and participated in conferences in Costa Rica, the Philippines, Hebron in the West Bank, Bolivia, Thailand, Korea and Malaysia. He also was a Fulbright lecturer at the University of Benin in Togo in West Africa.

The upcoming journey will take Miller to a developing black African country in the heart of South Africa. According to a standard reference book, Lesotho had a population of 1.3 million in 1980. The country primarily produces agricultural products. Industry and commerce lag far behind.

Miller said part of his job will be to look at the depth and scope of the technical programs and the degree to which comprehensive education is offered.

Miller said during the day he will observe technical programs and talk with people. At night, he will study position papers from the United Nations and other sources and will be "putting the pieces of the jigsaw puzzle together."

Miller calls the process "inductive," noting it is sometimes difficult working with the reports.

A group from Lesotho which is knowledgeable in the technical careers field will help with the research.

"When I travel alone, I try to form a working committee to help me pull together the picture in terms of my perception and in terms of what's taking place," he said. "The committee also makes sure I'm not trying to force the pieces of the puzzle."

Such trips are usually

Higher Education: 0 White Sox: 1

WELL, COLLEGE STUDENTS, House Speaker Michael Madigan and the Legislature really "socked" it to you. While you face the uncertain possibility of a tuition hike, the Chicago White Sox will get a new stadium.

Madigan, D-Chicago, displayed a skewed sense of priorities by letting the General Assembly vote to build the Sox a new stadium so the team wouldn't move to Florida, depriving Illinois of one of its two professional baseball franchises.

In his actions, Madigan showed that he favored keeping a bunch of high-salaried, scrotum-scratching jocks over bolstering academics and giving more money to the sick and the elderly.

MADIGAN PERMITTED THE Sox bill to get on the agenda. The voting even was permitted to go three minutes past the midnight, June 30 deadline, as Gov. James R. Thompson worked the General Assembly floor, persuading lawmakers to cast favorable votes.

Thompson had worked harder for the tax increase, stumping for support around the state.

But Madigan didn't lift a finger to get Thompson's tax increase onto the Legislature floor. He claimed the people of Illinois didn't want a tax increase.

Just who is running the state? Certainly not Thompson. Madigan, with his almost god-like power, controls the Legislature agenda, thus having a great influence over the destiny of the state.

BASING HIS DECISIONS on a narrow-minded, upstate point-of-view, Madigan lets the Legislature vote on only the items he thinks are in the state's best interest.

The tax increase that Madigan killed would have turned around the state's faltering university systems. The increase also would have provided first class care for homeless children, the elderly and the disabled.

Madigan, who hails from a comfortable south-side Chicago neighborhood and sends his children to a private school, obviously sees no funding problem with public schools and welfare programs.

Madigan's political ego got in the way of the tax increase. He wouldn't let the spendthrift Republicans raise taxes, regardless of public opinion.

Daily Egyptian editors 'out of touch'

How far out of touch can the editorial staff get? Every day the Daily Egyptian editors jump up on their soapbox and preach their radically liberal opinions on page four for everyone to see. At first it was amusing (allowing convicted murderers and rapists to "spend time alone" with their spouses, thus decreasing the sexual violence occurring in prisons. Before supporting this action editors, think about the families of the murdered and the raped and the time they get to spend with their loved ones!) But last week's commentary regarding President Reagan's war on drugs deserves a response.

For those who didn't have an opportunity to read it, or were laughing too hard to finish it, those responsible for writing the commentary supported the idea of using taxpayers' money to purchase drugs for college students previously convicted of illegal drug use. The editors also stated that revoking the drivers license of a person convicted of illegal drug use is too stiff a penalty for the crime.

The editorial staff based its support of federally subsidized drug use among college students on the argument that "by taking away the financial aid used to attain a degree, college students would be forced out on the streets, burdening, rather than helping, society..." and "...society expects that we get degrees to make significant contributions to the betterment of society." Society also believes in fair punishment, editors. If a student realizes that being convicted of illegal drug use could mean the loss of federal loans or grants, maybe he or she will think twice about using drugs.

As for the drivers license revocation, the editors argue that in today's society, the automobile is necessary "...to further ourselves intellectually and financially. Without a car, people are likely to turn to the kind behavior that leads to drug use." If a person has already been convicted of drug use, hasn't that person already turned to that kind of behavior? If you feel that revoking a drivers license for a certain period of time is too harsh, what do you recommend as punishment?

Fortunately, an overwhelmingly large majority of people support President Reagan's proposal of revoking federal funds and drivers licenses from those convicted of illegal drug use. Why do you feel students should be excluded from the war on drugs? America is getting sick of the ultra-liberal, anti-Reagan crusades the media so thoroughly enjoys. History will honor Ronald Reagan as one of the greatest presidents in the history of our nation. Why don't you try that? — John Forbes, junior, accounting and finance

Editors' note: The Daily Egyptian supports revocation of student loans to people convicted of drug-related crimes as long as the punishment is not permanent.

Former DE print shop head dies

By Susan Curtis
Staff Writer

Phillip Eugene Roche, former superintendent of the print shop at the Daily Egyptian, died at 4:45 p.m. Sunday in Carbondale Manor Nursing Home. He was 68.

Mr. Roche was hired at the DE in 1971 as assistant superintendent of the print shop. He was promoted to superintendent in 1973 and held that position until May 1987.

Mr. Roche was a "true professional who took pride in his work," said Marion Rice, former director of the School of Journalism.

"He was always cooperative in doing the extra project and he was one printer who cared about what the ink symbols on the newsprint said," Rice said.

"Phil Roche left a legacy of dedication toward making the Daily Egyptian the best student newspaper in the country," Walter Jaehning, director of the School of Journalism, said. "He was the cornerstone of the production system of the Daily Egyptian and oversaw the newspaper's growth from the time the new press was installed in 1971. Even on his last day on the job he was making plans for even more state-of-the-art technology for the student paper."

Mr. Roche came to work at the DE when it had just moved into the Communications Building and the press was new. Rice said. The DE didn't have any equipment that Mr. Roche couldn't repair, he said.

Mr. Roche worked as press foreman at the Daily Illini, the University of Illinois campus paper, from 1954 to 1971.

Visitation for Mr. Roche will be held from 6 to 9 tonight at the Riggins-Pillarsch Funeral Home in Carterville. Funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. Wednesday. Burial will be in the Blairsville Cemetery.

Survivors include his mother Catherine Wilson of Sebring, Florida; a daughter Mary Edwards of Carterville; two sons, Phillip Michael of Effingham and Robert of St. Louis; three brothers, Russell and Allen Wilson of Indiana and Ken Wilson of California; and six grandchildren.

The plane crashed in the strait near Hengham Island, off the Iranian coast, scattering debris over several miles.

The downing of the jetliner marked the worst incident of its kind in aviation history. It surpassed the toll of 269 people killed aboard Korean Air Lines Flight 007 that strayed off course and was shot down by Soviet fighters over Sakhalin Island Sept. 1, 1983.

Reagan vehemently condemned the attack at the time and angrily rejected attempted comparisons Monday between the Soviet and American actions against unarmed civilian aircraft. He argued the Airbus was sighted only on radar whereas the Soviet pilots identified the KAL visually and then fired missiles at it.

"It was an understandable accident," Reagan said.

But the Soviet Union dismissed Washington's "excuses" for the shutdown, condemned the act and used the incident to repeat its demands that the United States withdraw its warships from the volatile gulf.

Bush defends Navy actions

ELMWOOD PARK, Ill. (UPI) — Vice President George Bush defended the United States Navy Monday in the mistaken destruction of an Iranian civilian airliner, earning a round of applause from those attending an Independence Day festival.

Bush, the Republican Presidential candidate, and his wife, Barbara, attended the fourth annual "Summer Magic 88" festival, a four-day event sponsored by the Elmwood Park Civic Foundation.

Reagan says U.S. ships will remain in Persian Gulf despite plane 'tragedy'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan said Monday the Navy's destruction of an Iranian civilian jet with 290 people aboard was an "understandable accident" but reaffirmed his determination to keep U.S. ships in the perilous Persian Gulf.

As a six-member team of Pentagon investigators left for the gulf to conduct an official 15-day examination of Sunday's incident, Reagan returned to the White House from Camp David, Md., and again said the action was a "tragedy."

However, the president was emphatic the action would not force a re-evaluation of the U.S. policy of escorting neutral vessels through the gulf, a key battleground of the nearly 8-year-old war between Iran and Iraq.

"We want peace in the gulf," Reagan said, "but we also want the right of navigation of international waters."

The $1 billion Aegis-class cruiser Vincennes, sailing in the western half of the gulf near the Strait of Hormuz, was fighting Iranian gunboats Sunday morning when the ship's radar — some of the most sophisticated in the U.S. arsenal — detected a plane heading directly for the Navy ship, losing altitude and gaining speed.

After four minutes of tracking the plane, the ship's commander, Capt. Will Rogers, determined the craft to be hostile. The Vincennes fired two Standard surface-to-air missiles at the French-made Iran Air Airbus A-300, destroying it and killing its 290 passengers and crew.

Pentagon sources said Rogers sent a message to his superiors shortly after the engagement saying he believes his ship and crew were being threatened by the incoming plane.

Military sources familiar with the message Rogers sent said the captain spoke of repeated attempts to contact the approaching jet and of holding fire as the plane closed on his ship.

Rogers' message said, "This is a burden I will carry for the rest of my life, but under the circumstances, and considering all the information available to me at the moment, I took this action to defend my ship and my crew."

The Pentagon's initial reports of the engagement early Sunday erroneously reported that the downed aircraft was an F-14. Nearly 12 hours after the incident, Adm. William Crowe, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of staff, announced that the plane was indeed the civilian airliner.

Ship's captain: Plane was apparent threat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Capt. Will Rogers III reported to the Pentagon that his order to fire a missile that brought down a civilian Iran jet was "a burden I will carry for the rest of my life" but insisted he was defending his ship from an apparent threat, sources said Monday.

Military sources familiar with a message Rogers sent Pentagon officials a short time after Sunday's incident said Rogers spoke of repeated attempts to contact the approaching jet and of holding fire as the plane closed on his ship, the $1 billion Aegis-class cruiser Vincennes.

The Vincennes fired two Standard surface-to-air missiles at the French-made Iran Air Airbus A-300, destroying it and killing its 290 passengers and crew.

His personal comments were attached to an operational message detailing a chronology of the events in the Strait of Hormuz that began with Iranian patrol boats firing on a helicopter from the Vincennes.

Military sources said Rogers — a decorated Navy veteran — was in the ship's nerve center, the combat information center, for the duration of the engagement.

Officials familiar with the message, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, quoted Rogers as reporting, "I believed the aircraft to be a definite threat to this unit (the Vincennes) and operating in direct response to the ongoing surface engagement."

Sources said Rogers was in contact with the commander of the joint task force in the Persian Gulf and obtained permission to engage the target.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. inspection team, headed by Navy Rear Adm. William N. Fogarty, left the United States for the Persian Gulf Monday to "conduct a thorough investigation" of the accidental downing of an Iranian airliner that killed 290 people.

Fingers point to U.S., Iran in jet accident

The downing of Iran Air Flight 655 by a U.S. warship in the Persian Gulf drew urgent appeals for peace in the region Monday as well as condemnation and questions about American naval presence in the waterway.

The U.S. warship Vincennes shot down Iran Air Flight 655 en route from the Iranian city of Bandar Abbas to Dubai with 290 people on board Sunday while engaging in sea battles with Iran. The Pentagon said it mistook the airliner for an F-14 fighter. All passengers and crew were believed killed.

Leaders in Asia, Europe, the Middle East and Latin America said the tragedy magnified the need for a peaceful settlement to the nearly 8-year-old war between Iran and Iraq.

"The absurd tragedy feeds a sense of dismay in the face of the painful balance of innocent victims constrained to pay atrociously the price of a conflict without end that has already sown so much death and destruction among the civilian population," the Vatican Radio said.

Fogarty's orders instructed him to "conduct a thorough investigation into all the circumstances connected with the subject incident." He was instructed to report his "findings of fact, opinions and recommendations as to the cause of the incident; the reason for the attack, the

All testimony taken from U.S. personnel involved must be under oath, Fogarty was told. Navy Lt. Cmdr. Christine M. Yuhas, an attorney, was named as counsel for the investigation.

Herman, did you know
SPUDS is a girl dog?

You mean Mr. Macho is a transvestite?? That pooch, which represents chauvinism in our society, is a girl??

All those beer-bellied macho men, who call it open season on homosexuals, idolize
this transvestite dog?? This can't be real!

But it is real, Herman. Irony and sexism brought to life in the Twilight Zone.

Monday's win at Wimbledon proves that Edberg is tough

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Stefan Edberg is not one for swagger. But his four-set victory Monday over Boris Becker in the Wimbledon final proved he is one tough player.

The 22-year-old Swede, ranked No. 3 in the world, was seeded third at Wimbledon, behind Ivan Lendl and Mats Wilander.

Nevertheless, Becker, the No. 6 seed, was favored Monday even though he faced Lendl and defending champion Pat Cash in the previous rounds.

In a match dragged out for 24 hours because of rain delays, Edberg won 4-6, 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 6-2. The outcome should quiet those who wonder about Edberg's fortune.

"I think today — and this year at Wimbledon — I've responded to that," Edberg said. "I've proved something to myself and to other people."

Though he slipped quietly into the final, as Cash, Becker and Lendl battled in the upper half of the draw, Edberg rallied to two victories to earn his showdown with the Wimbledon champion of 1985 and 1986.

In the semifinals, he beat Czechoslovakia's Miloslav Mecir 4-6, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4.

"I think that was maybe the key match in the tournament," Edberg said. "To be two sets down that gives you a lot of confidence. It makes you feel you are strong and you should keep fighting."

That confidence carried Edberg through his locker-room wait when he was instructed to prepare to play only to find it was raining again. The match began at 6:33 p.m. Sunday, 4½ hours behind schedule. It didn't finish until 5:11 p.m. Monday, after the players spent 2 hours, 50 minutes on court.

Edberg's on-court coolness, reminiscent of his compatriot Bjorn Borg, a five-time Wimbledon champion, gave way to incredulity when Becker gave him the match with a backhand error on the second match point. Edberg had blown a forehand and left an open court for Becker.

"He could have hit it anywhere and won the point, but he waited too late," Edberg said. "You can always tell, he shows it if he is upset. I was hitting a lot of returns and that was giving him trouble. I could see he didn't know what to do."

Edberg had moved from Sweden to London, saying he enjoys the relative obscurity away from home. The new champion now must confront his new celebrity.

"I don't think it will change," he said. "I think you make your own problems a little bit. I'll just try to stay the same person."

Becker was worn out in both body and mind

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Boris Becker was weary in body and mind Monday.

"I played the defending champion (Pat Cash) and the world No. 1 (Ivan Lendl) and beat them both to get here," he said after losing the Wimbledon final to Stefan Edberg in four sets. "Those matches took a lot out of my body and my mental toughness."

"I did all I had to do, I'm a human being. But in the final it felt like: What the hell am I still doing here?"

Becker was beaten 4-6, 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 6-2 in a match that took two days to complete because of rain. It was the first time the No. 6 seed from West Germany ever lost on his beloved center court.

Becker, outclassed most of the match by Edberg's crisp serve-and-volley attack, said the prospect of facing the unassuming but powerful Swede barely crossed his mind leading up to the final.

"I wasn't thinking at all about playing Stefan," said the 1985 and 1986 champion. "He was way down in the other part of the draw. When we finally played, I felt like I had already spent many days here."

Becker said the rain delays contributed to his sluggishness.

"I couldn't push myself when I needed it the most. He was more psyched up than me," he said. "His comeback (from two sets down against Miloslav) Mecir in the semifinals also helped him."

The West German refused to blame his loss on the weather but said he would have preferred to have played the entire match Sunday.

"It would have been easier to have beaten him yesterday," he said. "I felt (after coming back to 2-3 from 0-3 in the first set) that I had gotten into a groove. I felt on top of him. I was a step slow on my backhand today, that makes me a little bit mad."

The traditional Center Court awards ceremony also held considerably less appeal for Becker than it has in the past.

"What else can I say, but I'll be back to win this again," he said.

Edberg coach from juniors not surprised

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — The man who coached Bjorn Borg and Stefan Edberg as junior players says he is not surprised by the latest Swedish success story at Wimbledon.

"He was the player I hoped would be able to follow up Borg's successes at Wimbledon," Coach Percy Rosberg said of Edberg, a four-set winner Monday over Boris Becker for the Wimbledon title. "His victory was very impressive but not very surprising."

Rosberg coached Edberg to his junior Gram Slam title in 1984. Edberg is the first Swedish Wimbledon champion since Borg completed his stretch of five straight crowns in 1980.

The turning point may have been when Edberg rallied from a 4-1 deficit to win a five-set duel against Czechoslovakia's Miloslav Mecir in the Davis Cup quarterfinals in April.

"That game proved to Stefan he could be strong and relentless in difficult situations," Olsson said.

rain halted play for 1 hour, 40 minutes.

Although Becker went on to wrap up the set, Edberg's confidence was gaining. By the time of the second-set tie-breaker, the Swede was dictating play.

"I thought the second set was very important," Becker said. "When I lost it I thought, 'My God, what's happening?'"

A backhand return down the line enabled Edberg to break for a 2-1 lead in the third set, eroding Becker's confidence and sparking his temper. After Edberg pounded out a service winner, the West German hurled his racket to the ground and received a code violation warning. The outburst merely spurred Edberg.

"You can look at his temper," Edberg said. "He shows it if he's upset. I could tell he was upset today and that gave me confidence."

Edberg was content to coast on his break and he served out a love game to take a one-set lead. Even when Edberg hit a shot poorly, things went his way. A shot off the racket frame earned him a break point in the opening game of the third set. Becker appeared so rattled he double-faulted.

Becker produced the occasional bullet forehand, but whenever he seemed to challenge, Edberg replied with an even finer shot. Any hope the West German had disappeared in the fifth game when Edberg broke with a spectacular backhand down the line. Becker held his next two service games but could do nothing to stop Edberg's victory march.

Becker was attempting to match his compatriot's success two days earlier when Graf beat eight-time champion Martina Navratilova in three sets. The last time one country produced both champions in one year at Wimbledon was in 1961 with Americans John McEnroe and Chris Evert.

On Monday, Graf and Argentine partner Gabriela Sabatini won the women's doubles crown, beating the Soviet Union's Natalia Zvereva and Larisa Savchenko 6-3, 1-6, 12-10.

In the men's doubles finals, Ken Flach and Robert Seguso of the United States defeating John Fitzgerald of Australia and Anders Jarryd of Sweden 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, 7-6 (7-3).

played in only three World Cups — 1930, 1934 and 1950. However, as host of the 1994 tournament it automatically qualifies for the 24-nation event.

The 1994 World Cup will involve 52 games across the country and will last for 30 days in June and July.

Eighteen stadiums — all grass fields in accordance with FIFA rules — are being considered as game sites. No more than 12 will be used. FIFA and the U.S. Soccer Federation will decide after 1992 on the venue for the final. It is likely to be the Coliseum in Los Angeles, site of the 1932 and 1984 Olympics.

"The decision is very important for our sport," said Paul Stiehl, treasurer of the USSF. "It means soccer moves from page 15 behind the tire ads to the front page. This will be the greatest sporting event ever held in the U.S. and this includes the 1984 Olympics."

The 1986 World Cup final in Mexico City between Argentina and West Germany was seen by more than a billion television viewers.

Werner Fricker, president of the USSF, said the country faces a "monumental task" in

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit said Monday that he has given his informal approval to the selection made by President Guyon, but that the choice was Guyon's to make.

"It was essentially John's decision because he's the one that will be working closely with the athletics director," Pettit said. "I don't believe in overruling the president's decision."

Pettit said that all four candidates were outstanding, but it was a matter of finding the one whose qualifications fit the needs of the University.

"I think John made a good choice," he said. "I'm glad the search is over."

preparing for the event.

"The U.S. public is interested in all major sporting events," he said. "The Los Angeles Olympics (1984) proved our theory that soccer can fill the stadiums. Soccer was the best supported spectator sport in the Olympics and we expect the stadiums to be full to 80 percent capacity or better."

The United States, in deference to American football, has refrained from calling soccer by its proper name.

"The U.S. is rich in soccer tradition, sorry, football tradition," Fricker said. "Football has been played in the U.S. for over 100 years and our federation is over 75 years old."

"We are not a major power like Italy or Brazil, but we are developing. We have a youth program which has really mushroomed and our junior national team has made just unbelievable progress. We have about 10 to 12 million players in the U.S."

The United States previously sought the 1986 World Cup but was beaten out by Mexico. In making that bid five years ago, the Americans attempted to apply diplomatic muscle, but the move backfired.

At that time, the now-defunct North American Soccer League and FIFA had strained relations. The USSF and FIFA now enjoy a harmonious relationship.

Joao Havelange, the Brazilian president of FIFA, and Abilio D'Almeida, Brazil's representative on the executive committee, abstained from the voting.

Brazil is suffering from widespread economic problems and disorganization within its soccer leagues. Havelange said Morocco would be considered favorably if it bids for the 1998 World Cup. A World Cup has never been held in Africa.

The United States caused one of the biggest World Cup shocks in 1950 when it beat a mighty England team 1-0 in Brazil. But that was the last time the Americans qualified for the tournament.

The U.S. team has had moderate success against such small-time soccer countries as Luxembourg, Iceland and Malta. The Americans have qualified for this year's Olympic soccer competition in Seoul, but that tournament holds little importance in international soccer terms.

Brazilian fans say chaos aided U.S.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — Brazilian soccer fans said Monday that the decision to bypass Brazil for the 1994 World Cup showed how chaos and political infighting have eroded the sport in the country.

FIFA, international soccer's ruling body, awarded the tournament to the United States, rejecting bids by Morocco and Brazil, a World Cup champion in 1958, 1962 and 1970.

"This shows just how much Brazilian soccer has lost its prestige," said 53-year-old accountant Sebastiao Araujo, who recalled when such players as Pele and Garrincha dominated the world.

Jose Ruben, a 34-year-old electrician, said "no one believes in Brazilian soccer anymore — not even Brazilians."

Geraldo Silva, a 28-year-old office boy who cannot afford to travel to another country, said his dreams of going to a World Cup were now dashed.

"For Brazil, that's it at least until next century."

The World Cup, held every four years, is to be staged next in Italy in 1990. The tournament traditionally rotates between Latin America and Europe. The next turn for Brazil would be in 2002, but emerging soccer nations in Asia and Africa may delay its chance even further.

Araujo recognized that "it's always difficult to compete against the United States," but he also blamed "incompetent" officials in Brazil's soccer federation.

"I don't think FIFA trusted the Brazilian directors," he said.

Jair Fernandes, a 36-year-old office clerk, said the federation was plagued by politics.

"If they (federation directors) can't even run the national competition, how do they expect to be allowed to run a World Cup?" he said.

AD candidates not informed of pick

By Beth Clavin
Staff Writer

None of the candidates for athletics director seems to know who was chosen.

President John C. Guyon will announce the new athletics director at 9 a.m. today in the Student Center video lounge.

Three of the candidates for athletics director say they have not been told of the press conference today. The son of the other candidate, Jim Hart, said he didn't believe his father was told by the University about the conference or who was chosen for the position.

The candidates for the position are interim athletics director Charlotte West, Sonoma (California) State University athletics director Ralph Barkey, Central Missouri State University athletics director Jerry Hughes, and Hart, who played with the St. Louis Cardinals as a quarterback and played football for the Seahawks.

West said she met with Guyon Friday morning but learned about the press conference later from a friend.

Hart was not aware of the press conference when contacted Saturday, and his son said Monday that Hart and his wife were at the VP Fair in St. Louis, which is a Fourth of July celebration.

Barkey said Monday night from his home in California that he hadn't heard about the conference. "I wish good luck to them (the University) with whomever they have chosen."

Guyon reached his decision Friday. He interviewed members of the athletics department and met with the search committee Wednesday, but no decision was reached.

He said he would not meet with the committee again, but has been contacting them on an individual basis. He declined any more information before the press conference.

"(Guyon) will present the new athletics director at this meeting," West said.

West also acknowledged the possibility of being chosen as athletics director and Jim Hart being appointed as fundraiser. "That's a proposal that a lot of people have endorsed," she said. "That would be fine with me."

She declined any further comment until the press

Wimbledon titles go to Edberg, Graf

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Stefan Edberg, taking two days to complete a command performance, Monday defeated Boris Becker 4-5, 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 5-2 to win the rain-delayed Wimbledon final.

Edberg, the first Swedish finalist at Wimbledon since Bjorn Borg's five-year reign ended in 1981, used superb volleying to foil a West German double at the $4.3 million championships.

Steffi Graf won the women's crown Saturday 5-7, 6-2, 6-1. Graf has won three of the four tournaments in the Grand Slam circuit: the Australian Open, the French Open and Wimbledon. If she wins at the U.S. Open in September, she will be only the third woman to sweep the Slam. Only two men have won all four tournament in a single Grand Slam series.

Although the actual playing time in the Edberg-Becker match was 2 hours, 50 minutes, the match was recorded as the longest final in Wimbledon history, starting at 6:33 p.m. Sunday and finishing 22 hours, 38 minutes later.

Becker, champion in 1985 and 1986, was smothered at the net by the world's No. 3 player. Edberg took control after dropping the opening set that had resumed with the sixth game. The Swede was leading 3-2 before play halted Sunday night.

"That's the best match I have ever played in a Grand Slam tournament," said Edberg, winner of the Australian Open in 1985 and 1987.

Edberg served well and returned solidly but it was his lightning reflexes at the net that proved decisive. He sapped the sting from Becker's potent backhand to such an extent that the West German's confidence touched bottom.

This was clear on the final point when the 22-year-old Swede returned a forehand off the top of his racket. Presented with an open court, Becker sent his backhand into the net.

"It would have been easier for me to have finished yesterday," Becker said. "I felt I was getting into a groove, I felt on top of him."

"I couldn't psyche myself up when I needed it the most. I had already played the defending champion (Pat Cash) and the world No. 1 (Ivan Lendl) and beaten them both. That took a lot out of me, both physically and mentally."

"Edberg was more psyched than I was. I wasn't able to pass him from my backhand. I felt I was a step slow. That makes you a little bit mad and he was playing well."

Edberg was so overwhelmed by his victory that he left his racket behind and had to return for it before being handed the coveted trophy and the $272,250 winner's check.

"It's just hard to believe I really won it," Edberg said. "It hasn't really sunk in yet. I could not believe he missed that last point."

Becker started well by breaking Edberg in the seventh game and led 5-4 when

Runners hold games' flame

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

In the Olympic tradition, the Prairie State Games Torch Run began the Carbondale World Fair July 4.

The seven-and-a-half mile course through Carbondale to University Mall took approximately 40 runners about an hour to complete. Sammye Fark, the coordinator of the noncompetitive run, said.

The "fun run" was held to promote the Prairie State Games, a state-wide sports competition that will be held in Champaign July 20 through 23, Fark said.

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard started the run and City Manager Bill Dixon was the first torch carrier. "After you run a bit, the torch gets a little heavy," Dixon said after quitting about an eighth of a mile into the race.

The torch was carried across the finish line by the Torch Run committee's course designer Bruce Wallace of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, a Carbondale youth program. Wallace said the course was designed for "maximum exposure" to the public.

Mayor Dillard proclaimed July 4 to be Torch Run day at Carbondale after the race.

The run, in its third year, began as a 20-mile relay but was changed because of the lack of spectators for a long-distance event, Fark said.

The Carbondale World Fair came out of the need for something for the spectators and participants to do after the run, Fark said, and is expected to become a Fourth of July tradition.

"The run not only promotes the Prairie State Games, but also the city of Carbondale," Fark said. Carbondale is the southernmost city in Illinois to offer the Torch Run.

The event was run by local volunteers and the Marion Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. provided banners, soft drinks and T-shirts.

U.S. gets World Cup, the top soccer tourney

ZURICH, Switzerland (UPI) — The United States, a country that does not even call soccer by its correct name, Monday was awarded the 1994 World Cup — the most prestigious event in the sport.

FIFA, world soccer's governing body, awarded the tournament to the Americans on the Fourth of July. The United States received 10 votes, Morocco 7 and Brazil 2 for an event that ranks in stature with the Olympics.

They were the only three candidates for the 1994 tournament. The World Cup is staged every four years and traditionally has alternated between Europe and Latin America. The 1990 World Cup will be held in Italy.

"We expect the decision to have a big effect on U.S. football," FIFA Vice President Harry Cavan of Northern Ireland said in announcing the decision. "Obviously, staging the World Cup could lead to a tremendous development of the game in the States."

"I'm pleased to notice the U.S. delegation already is using the word football instead of soccer to describe the sport as we call the game in the rest of the world."

The United States, with no significant soccer league and a weak national team, has
